The Latest Journal Articles

Acute low back pain (LBP) is the condition that causes the majority of disability worldwide. The literature regarding the best pharmacological management of acute LBP is limited, and the indications are often conflicting. To help address these issues, the Journal of Orthopaedic

Research has just published the study, "Nonopioid Pharmacological Management of Acute Low Back Pain: A Level I of Evidence Systematic Review." This article was featured in last month's Wiley Research Headlines, as well as CNN and HealthDay.
